When we step into the darkness to bear witness to distress, we are privileged to observe moments of great strength and courage. Never stop searching for those wise adaptations; they exist in each of us.